THE ARTS

In 2000, EFA continued to support arts programs for at-risk students which not only exposed them to the inspiration, creativity, and entertainment found through experiencing the arts, but also helped to foster in those students a stronger sense of self-esteem and personal accomplishment. Other programs supported by EFA funding supported new theatre works and audience expansion.

DRUG POLICY REFORM

The focus of EFA funding in the area of drug policy reform was on community outreach through expansion of online services, education of the public and policy makers, the production of a film on the consequences of marijuana legalization, and harm reduction (a set of practical strategies that reduce negative consequences of drug use, incorporating a spectrum of strategies from safer use, to managed use, to abstinence). Drug policy reform is tightly linked with effects to social welfare, economic conditions, and health care access, which are all areas of EFA interest.

EDUCATION

EFA Board interest in the field of education during 2000 has continued to involve programs aimed at supporting at-risk children from pre-school to high school, community education and outreach, resolving social service issues, developing innovative new curricula, and providing learning enhancement (such as development of leadership skills and resources for educators). The Board will continue to focus on educational issues into the future, supporting educational opportunities beneficial to students, teachers and community partnerships across the nation.

ENVIRONMENT

The primary area of funding for EFA in 2000 continued to be environmental issues. The focus of EFA funding was on approaches to sustainable agriculture, citizen oversight of nuclear power facilities, land conservation and protection of roadless forest areas, and providing technical assistance and training to environmental groups. EFA also continued to concentrate on issues that have become a central concern to the community as a whole, such as genetically modified foods and bio-pollution.

NATIVE AMERICAN ISSUES

In 2000, EFA continued to pursue its goal of improving the lives and preserving the culture of North American native peoples. EFA's priorities in Native American funding included programs that boost the academic progress and positive self-image of Native American students; provide educational opportunities to Native American students and communities; promote wildlife protection and environmental conservation of native lands; strive to preserve the traditions of the past (art, language, storytelling, religion, etc.); and provide legal representation and educational services to communities whose voices would not otherwise be heard.

PEACE

The goals of proposals in the area of Peace are generally to restrict flow of arms to abusive forces, promote social responsibility among multinational corporations, and defend the cause of academic freedom in countries where human rights are not routinely respected. In 2000, EFA funding supported continued development of a webs site in order to make information about global events more easily accessible.
