

EFA 2001 Annual Report

THE ARTS

In 2001, EFA continued to support arts programs for at-risk students which not only exposed them to the inspiration, creativity, and entertainment found through experiencing the arts, but also helped to foster in those students a stronger sense of self-esteem and personal accomplishment. Other programs supported by EFA funding supported new theatre works and audience expansion.

DRUG POLICY REFORM

In 2001, the focus of EFA funding in the area of drug policy reform was on community outreach through harm reduction (a set of practical strategies that reduce negative consequences of drug use, incorporating a spectrum of strategies from safer use, to managed use, to abstinence), education of the public and policy makers, and promotion of legal and public support for upholding the family. Drug policy reform is tightly linked with effects to social welfare, economic conditions, and health care access, which are all areas of EFA interest.

EDUCATION

In 2001, EFA Board interest in the field of education continued to involve programs aimed at supporting at-risk children from pre-school through high school during school hours and after school, community education and outreach, increasing parent involvement, environmental education, resolving social service issues, developing innovative new curricula, and providing learning enhancement (such as development of leadership skills and resources for educators). The Board will continue to focus on educational issues into the future, supporting educational opportunities beneficial to students, teachers and community partnerships across the nation.

ENVIRONMENT

In 2001, EFA's primary area of funding continued to be environmental issues. The focus of EFA funding was on approaches to sustainable agriculture and promotion of family farms, protection and restoration of water quality and habitat, promotion of renewable energy and energy conservation, citizen oversight of nuclear power facilities, land conservation and protection of roadless forest areas, and providing technical assistance and training to environmental groups. EFA also continued to concentrate on issues that have become a central concern to the community as a whole, such as genetically modified foods and bio-pollution.

PEACE

The goals of proposals in the area of Peace are generally to restrict flow of arms to abusive forces, promote social responsibility among multinational corporations, and defend the cause of academic freedom in countries where human rights are not routinely respected. In 2001, EFA funding supported expansion of the terms of the debate on defense spending, defense policy and a U.S. military-dominated foreign policy.
